OVERVIEW

An all-in-one app

Teams is the platform where you bring together your day-to-day conversations, meetings, and documents.

Meet

Video, audio, and screen sharing meetings.

Chat

Individual and group messages and mentions.

Call

Direct calls and history in one place.

Integrate apps

The tools you already use, within Teams.

Key idea: connect, collaborate, and stay in the flow of your work.

The three zones of the screen

1 · App bar

On the left: activity, chat, teams, calendar, calls, and files. Drag the icons to sort them to your liking.

2 · List Panel

Right next to it: your conversations, the teams you belong to, and your calendar.

3 · Content Area

The large space where work happens: the open chat, the post, or the meeting.

You can pin any app you use every day to the sidebar.

Presence and status message

Click on your photo or initials in the top right.

Presence Status

Available, Busy, or Do Not Disturb. Syncs with your calendar: Join a meeting and switch to Do Not Disturb when presenting, to Do Not Disturb to mute notifications.

Status message

Like an absence message: mention a colleague or indicate where to ask for help. You can set its duration, show it when they write to you and schedule your out of office.

Adjust Teams to the way you work

From the ellipsis next to your profile picture → Settings.

General

Theme, chat density, language, and background behavior.

Privacy

Who can skip your Do Not Disturb, blocked contacts, and read receipts.

Notifications

Missed activity emails, channel alerts, mentions, and reactions.

Devices

Speaker, microphone, camera, and where your files are opened.

Take a few minutes to notify you: it's the best way to avoid noise.

Your notification center

1

Feed and My Activity

The feed gathers what others send you; My Activity collects your own recent messages.

2

Only unread

Turn the filter on or off to see only what's pending.

3

Filter by person or type

Search by name or filter mentions, replies, reactions, and missed calls.

4

Direct access to settings

The gear icon takes you to the notification settings.

Send your first message

1

Start the conversation

Type the name in the search bar or create a new chat.

2

Write and send

Type in the bottom area and press Enter or the send button.

3

Use @mentions

Type @ and the name: the message will appear in your activity feed.

4

Apply formatting

The format icon adds bold, lists, and bullet points, just like in mail.

5

Anchor what's important

You can pin up to 15 chats to always have them on top.

Group chats and chat with yourself

Group chats

Any participant can add or remove people. When you remove someone, you keep the previous history, but you stop seeing new messages.

History when adding

When you onboard someone, you choose whether to share the entire history, the last few days, or nothing. Everyone sees who came in, who left, and what was shared.

Chat with yourself

A pinned space for your notes, drafts, and reference files. Great for practicing chat features.

In a team, on the other hand, only the owner controls who enters and who leaves.

Think about the rooms in a house

A team is the house; each channel, a room with its own function. Every team starts with the General channel.

Create meaningful channels

By zone, project, or topic, and agree on it with the team so everyone knows where to post.

Sort your list

Pin key channels above, hide the ones you don't use, and reorder teams according to your day-to-day life.

Control the warnings

Right-click on a channel → notifications: all posts, only mentions or own settings.

Channel conversations and files

1

Threaded conversations

Reply within the thread to keep the topic in one place; what they mention to you is highlighted.

2

Mention the team or a person

@team alerts everyone; @name goes straight to the person you need.

3

Files tab

Gather all the documents in the channel without having to search through the history.

4

SharePoint in the background

Preview, links, and permissions from within Teams, with the latest version always available.

5

Version History

See who edited the document and retrieve any previous versions.

Create and schedule

The Teams calendar is the same as the Outlook calendar: they sync with each other.

1

Choose a slot on the calendar

Click on the time slot: The meeting is now created as a Teams meeting.

2

Add title and participants

Teams suggests times that work for all guests.

3

Use the scheduling assistant

Compare availability and choose the moment that fits the whole team.

4

Fill in the details

Replay, associated channel, and meeting agenda before sending the invitation.

Join and participate

Before you enter

Choose camera and microphone, adjust brightness, soft focus and noise suppression. With four or more assistants you will be automatically muted.

During the meeting

Chat, participant list, raise hand, reactions, notes, and audio options. Share full screen to toggle windows, or a specific window.

At the end

Leave the meeting or, if you're an organizer, end it for everyone. You can then mute or hide the chat for that meeting.

When chat isn't enough

Call from chat

Start an audio or video call, or share your screen, from the open conversation.

History and mailbox

Review incoming, outgoing, and missed calls, and listen to voicemails.

Detours and contacts

Set up call forwarding and add people to your contact groups or speed dial.

All your documents in one place

Recent

The documents you've been working with lately, ready to open.

Equipment

Files shared in channels, with the name, who modified them, and their location.

Share

Open them in Teams, the desktop app, or the browser. Better to share the link than to download.

OneDrive

In the chat files folder, you'll see what you've shared; what they're sending you is in each chat.
